OHIO STATISTICS. Sundry Remarks. I told a neighbor, lately, that the chief objection I had to his house under consideration as our future residence, was that I feared that the sun would not shine into the rooms enough to suit me. She laughed as though that was a new idea to her, and quite whimsical. The blinds on the house were not objectionable, as I should leave them open; except on rare occasions, but the wide verandas on the east and south sides would totally exclude the friendly sunbeams from the common sitting room. Even in summer I should not like to have so many cold days when sunshine is far better than a fire. My neighbor said that it always made her feel nervous to have the sun shine directly into her rooms. Now sunshine is one of the best remedies for nervousness, but I understand my neighbor to mean that the prying sunshine searching out every speck of dust and they robbed before coming in, would be a nuisance. I have heard of a lady who, after taking the water, I obtained relief, and since that time I have taken no medicine, except such as medical men, and presume if I could give myself reasonable rest, I would be quite well. Such testimony, from such a source, should indeed have convinced me.
